

Josh Billings Papers.

Dry goods are worshiped more in this world now than the Lord is. Counciling with fear is the way cowards are made; counciling with hope is the way heroes are made; counciling with faith is the way Christians are made.

Pleasure is like a hornet—generally ends with a sting.

The most dangerous character in the world are those who live in the suburbs of virtue—they are rotten ice. Laziness is a good deal like money—the more a man has of it, the more he seems to want.

There is no such thing as inheriting virtue; money and titles and fever sores can be inherited.

The virtues of a convent are like hot-house fruits—tender, but tasteless.

Life is like a mountain—after climbing up one side, and sliding down the other, put up the sled.

When a man proves a literary failure, he generally sets up for a critic, and, like the fox in the fable, who had lost his brush in a trap, can't see a nice long tail without hankering for it.

The devil owes most of his success to the fact that he is always on hand.

Cocquets often beat up the game, while the Frudes bag it.

There is only one excuse for impudence, and that is ignorance.

Modest men in trying to be impudent always get sassy.

Reputashun is like money—the principal is often lost by putting it out at interest.

Jealousy is nothing more than vanity, for if we love another more than we do ourselves we shall be jealous.

There is lots of folks in this world, who, rather than not find any fault at all, wouldn't hesitate to say a few words to the effect that his tail was altogether too long for the rest of his body.

There is money who are cut out for smart men, but who won't pay for making up.
